Foreword

This volume, No. 25 in the Federal Committee on Statistical Methodology (FCSM)'s Working Paper series, is the written record of the Data Editing Workshop and Exposition, held on March 22, 1996, at the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) Conference and Training Center. This conference was over a year in planning, by an Organizing Committee that was an outgrowth of the FCSM's Subcommittee on Data Editing. From an initial plan of ten or 20 papers and computer software demonstrations, and perhaps 100 attendees, the registrations and submissions kept growing until the final program consisted of 44 oral presentations and 19 software demonstrations on data editing, with over 500 conference attendees. This success is probably due to several causes, not the least of which were the many outstanding contributions by the authors whose work appears in this volume. Perhaps the high participation level also suggests that data editing has been an overlooked area in the work of Federal, state, and international statistical agencies, as well as private-sector organizations.

From the start it was our intention to plan and produce this conference on as close to a zero budget as possible. Our holding this goal seemed to foster an atmosphere of cooperation in which contributions and offers of assistance came forth from numerous sources and at the times they were most needed. From the early publicity provided by several agencies and collaborating organizations to the preparation by IRS of the works published in this volume, donations of time and effort were most generous. The BLS staff was truly outstanding in anticipating and handling the many physical arrangements for the Workshop. And the agencies listed as affiliations of the Organizing Committee members all contributed varying degrees of staff time towards ensuring the success of this conference.

We began the planning of the Data Editing Workshop and Exposition under the guidance of the FCSM and its founding chairperson, Maria Elena Gonzalez. After an illness, Maria passed away earlier this year and, while the FCSM continued its sponsorship of the conference and these Proceedings, Maria Gonzalez' departure is a deep personal and professional loss to all of us. Her career as a Federal government statistician spanned a quarter century, during which she made many contributions to improving the quality of Federal (and international) statistics. She did this both directly and as an outstanding leader in bringing forth and leveraging the talents of others for the many valuable statistical projects and conferences that she initiated. The editors would like to dedicate this Proceedings volume to Maria Gonzalez' memory, as was done by the Organizing Committee for the conference itself.

The next few pages contain the table of contents, followed by the conference contributions themselves. The conference program, including the list of sponsors and additional acknowledgments, is reproduced in an appendix.
